He said it was the duty of private two days with our real estate men individuals as well as of municipalities to look after their own interests. Our senators and representatives in duty by their constituents, and bills had already been introduced by Senator Plumb and Representative Anderson to provide for the erection of the building, but these gentlemen had a multiplicity of duties to perform and various interests to look after, and it was necessary that Sail. after, and it was necessary that Salina should have representatives at the Capital to assist in securing the needed legislation and in forwarding that matter. Mr. Banks thought day with his persimmon pole and as a committee from the council and acting by its authority would have more weight than would citizens in their private capacity. He had talked with a number of the leading talked with a number of the leading business men of the city and the concensus of opinion was that the council should appoint such committee and pay the necessary expense out of the city treasury. What action might be had he thought should be taken at once, as Congress would reassemble January 6th, and members of the committee. 6th, and members of the committee should such be appointed, should be named at once so that their private business might be arranged to after a permit an absence of some weeks. He did not think Mr. Ingails' bill for judicial districts would cut much figure in preventing the erection of the federal court house in Salina.
